

Having administered and worked with both paper and Electronic logs, I have to say that the Electronic logs far exceed paper logs. For the one simple fact of, the drivers can not cheat on their hours of service. Another point is that once the drivers get use to using EOBC's, they will love them as it takes all the work out of logging. Also your safety ratings will go up because the drivers are more alert. Our company has already seen a remarkable decline in accidents, Out of service orders of all violations and numourous other benefits from using the EOBC's.

As far as cost of the units, yes they can be expensive but so is the cost of a life if a driver falseifies his or hers logs. The cost will come down as the usage of the units goes up. Maybe the goveerment could give a tax break for installing the OBC's.

Lets be practicle and realise that the only Drivers and companies who would not want to use these divices are the ones who are now running over hours on a steady basis.
